PM Trudeau announcing a carbon tax break for heating oil last year.

Heating oil carbon tax reprieve at the heart of latest court challenge from Alberta to the feds

For the last twelve months, the province's Ministry of Justice, led by Minister of Justice and Deputy House Leader Mickey Amery, has been breaking down an announcement made by the federal government in October 2023, which gave homeowners who heat with heating oil, a break on the carbon tax.

Their question was,

On the road to the Olympics

By Serena Lapointe

Two young sisters from Anselmo recently got the opportunity of a lifetime thanks to hard work and dedication in a sport they both love. Natália Gonzales, 14 and her sister Nalani Gonzales, 12, have been Taekwondo athletes since they were toddlers. The pair call the Mayerthorpe and Whitecourt dojangs their home base and have spent countless hours training, practicing, learning, and excelling. They have also worked with several different leaders in the sport.

One of those is Master Sayed Najem, a Canadian Olympic medalist from the 1992 Barcelona Olympics, where he won silver in the bantamweight division. Taekwondo was still a demonstration sport that year and officially joined the Olympic arsenal in 2000. Master Najem has also won Pan-Am Gold and several Canadian titles.

Master Najem has held seminars and training events around the province over the years and has watched the girls grow in their abilities. At his request, Natália Gonzales joined him to help with his recent demonstrations. Both girls have trained with him during his past visits and consider him family. This year, though, the conversation changed. Master Najem said he saw Olympic potential in the girls and wanted to help guide them.

“I was honoured to be told that by an Olympic medalist and someone that still has a passion for the sport and is still up to date with it,” explained Natália. For Nalani, her excitement came through as only a little sister could. “I was very excited, knowing that I could get a lot better and potentially beat my sister because that’s one of my goals,” she laughed.

Master Najem currently lives in California, but with Whitecourt Taekwondo Master Jim Rennie’s blessing, the Gonzales sisters are now training once a week with Master Thai Le from Spirit Taekwondo in Edmonton and following a strict training schedule created by their Olympic medalist coach.

Since Natália is older, Master Najem is focused on getting her to the 2028 Olympics in Los Angeles. Her schedule involves daily training, including swimming, meditation, running, sprinting and kicking drills. “From there, we do spar training and drills in Edmonton. In the next few months, he’s going to see where she’s at and then hopefully get her to train with an Olympic medalist in Mexico for two weeks to a month,” explained her mom, Antoinette Gonzales. In the summer, depending on how things are going, Master Najem wants to see them go even further. “He is setting up a studio in California, and once it’s ready, he plans on bringing Natália and Nalani down for a month-long daily training visit. Either this summer or next summer, the girls will be going to South Korea for three months to train at an all-girls university, and he wants to do the training yearly,” explained Gonzales.

To prepare them and give them lots of experience, Master Najem has the girls attending three big tournaments early in 2025. The Canada Open and Canadian Nationals are in Montreal in February, and the US Open will be in Nevada. The girls recently competed in Mexico for the 2024 International Torneo ITOM in Puebla, thanks to an invite by Master Jim Rennie. Both girls brought back medals, including gold. When asked if she felt overwhelmed by the path before her, Natália said no. "The more you train physically, the more mentally prepared you'll be. In the back of your mind, if you don't train physically, you know you won't do as well as you hope, and that will affect your performance. But if you train and you put 100 percent effort into it and you still don't do amazing, then mentally you know that you gave it your all."

Natália will be 18 in 2028. "I'm willing to do whatever it takes to get there. I'm focusing on the Olympics, but I'm also enjoying the journey at the same time. Some people want the end goal but don't appreciate the journey and live in it. But I want to do both," she explained, with wisdom beyond her years.

For Nalani, the goal is the Olympics in 2032. "I have goals, and once I get to one, I'll know I'm getting better, which will drive me to the next goal, making the rest easier.

My goals are going to motivate me," said the 12-year-old. "Having someone tell you that you can make it there, to the Olympics, means the world. I'm honestly really excited."

For their mom, having Master Najem recognize talent in her children has her over the moon. "I'm thankful that someone is taking them under their wing. As a mom, you want to see your kids and see them reach their dreams. Knowing people out there want to help them get to that point, I am forever thankful for that."

Master Najem has built several national champions over the years, guiding them to the podium.

He has also worked in Hollywood, training Hayden Christensen as Anakin Skywalker in Star Wars II. He also fought alongside Steven Seagal in Attack Force and acted in the Wesley Snipes movie Hard Luck. He even trained Madonna. Now, he's training two grateful sisters from Anselmo with big dreams of reaching the Olympics.

Getting to national and international competitions comes with a hefty cost. "We are holding bottle drives and have bottles, buttons, t-shirts and pendants for sale. We also have sponsorship tiers for businesses," explained Gonzales, who owns a local branding company, ANND Branding.

Those wanting to support them can call 780-779-1086 or email anndbranding@gmail.com. They are also looking for items for a silent auction held on December 14.

Both girls have already gained a lot since starting the journey. Nalani has gained a best friend in Edmonton, Master Thai Le's daughter Avery, whom she sees when she trains there. Natália has gained a team she didn't know she needed. Taekwondo is typically an individual sport, but having a team to attend competitions with is a massive support system neither girl would want to be without. "I want to thank Mayerthorpe Taekwondo for starting us on this journey, and Whitecourt Taekwondo for welcoming us into this club with open arms, and Master Rennie.

Without him, none of this would be possible. I can't thank him enough," said Gonzales.

With a long road ahead, both girls are determined to reach their full potential. "Nothing is impossible. It's really about how much you are willing to put into it. I didn't think it was possible to get a coach or a team, and it happened. I'm so thankful for them. I didn't think having an Olympic medalist saying you've got potential was possible. So, if that's possible, then what else is possible?"

The provincial government is back in court against the federal government. After some big wins this year, including both the plastics ban and bill C-69 ruled unconstitutional, following challenges from Alberta, the province is back at it, and this time all aim is on the carbon tax. Premier Smith announcing her government's latest court challenge against feds.

is a deal on the carbon tax lawful and constitutional? Last week, Albertans found out the answer. In a press conference on Tuesday last week, Premier Danielle Smith and Minister Amery laid out the issue, explaining why they felt it was important for the province to head back to court against Ottawa.

Premier Smith said that the “punishment” of the carbon tax had, until recently, been shared equally across the country. “At the very least, that equal footing gave Canadians a unified front to push back on the federal government. A sense, maybe, that we were all in it together. But a year ago, almost to the day, Ottawa announced it was exempting heating oil from the federal carbon tax for three years,” she stated.

Premier Smith said she wasn’t resentful of the break given to those who use heating oil but felt it put some Canadians at a disad-vantage, specifically those who use anything but heating oil.

“Unfortunately, this exemption applies to practically no one outside of Eastern Canada. Less than one percent of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba use home heating oil. It’s one percent in British Columbia, two percent in Ontario, four percent in Quebec, seven percent in New Brunswick, 18 percent in Newfoundland and Labrador, 32 percent in Nova Scotia and 40 percent in Prince Edward Island,” she rounded off.

Across Canada, the energy use database from Natural Resources Canada shows that about 1.2 million homes use heating oil, and the percentages listed above show that most of those residences are in the East, with nearly one in three homes in the four Atlantic provinces using it.

It’s also more expensive as it can cost four times as much to generate the same amount of heat using oil versus natural gas.

When the three-year reprieve was announced last year, PM Trudeau said it was to allow residents time to switch to heat pumps. The pumps and installation could be free or paid through an interest-free loan, income-dependent. He said the savings made on electricity use would pay the loan back.

Around the same time, the Conservatives put forward a non-binding motion to remove the carbon tax from all home heating fuels, which did not pass. Liberal MPs from Atlantic Canada have supported similar motions, including MP Ken McDonald of Newfoundland and Labrador, who has supported previous motions to repeal the carbon tax.

“Home heating is not optional. Winter is coming again, and that means that Alberta families will again, feel the sting of the federal carbon tax as they heat their home with natural gas. Here in Alberta, we don’t tend to think that more taxes are the solution for anything, let alone a tax on everything our citizens need to live and thrive in this cold climate,” said Premier Smith during the press conference.

“We can debate why Ottawa made this decision. We may even have a few theories, but whatever their reasons, the outcome is blatantly unfair for people in Alberta and other parts of Canada who use natural gas and other fuels to stay warm in the winter. From where we’re sitting, it looks an awful lot like one more attempt to divide our country, to reward one region and punish another.”

Earlier that morning, on Tuesday, October 29, Alberta officially applied for a judicial review of the exemption in federal court. “We’re asking the court to declare the exemption both unconstitutional and unlawful. We hope this will force Ottawa to recognize the burden carbon tax places on Canadians and eliminate the tax altogether,” added Smith.

“According to their own communications, the exemption was intended to lower energy bills for people who use heating oil. They’re saying in effect, that some Canadians deserve lower energy bills, but not all. They are also more or less admitting that the federal carbon tax raises costs for households, which confirms what we’ve been saying about it all along.”

Minister Amery said they expected the review to take about twelve months and said they felt they had a strong case. He also said that giving a break on heating oil felt counter to the idea of the carbon tax, given it’s one of the highest emitting fuels. “You would think the federal government would reward that type of use (natural gas) by providing this exemption to Albertans and Western Canada. We know that natural gas burns cleaner, is more efficient, more environmentally conscious, and it’s not being recognized in any way.”

Premier Smith said the break also undermines the federal government’s entire argument. “The entire argument that the federal government made about why they needed to impose a federal retail carbon tax was to create fairness across the country. This clearly does not create fairness, and it exempts one of the highest-emitting fuels. I think it’s pretty clear that there are certain regions in the country that are disproportionately benefiting from this.”

When asked why she thought the federal government decided to offer the discount in the first place, Premier Smith said, “I certainly hope they wouldn’t be playing politics with something as important as home heating in the middle of winter in Canada. But the fact of the matter is that they have brought forward an exemption that violates their own law, and we believe it violates the constitution, and we’ll see if the courts agree.”

Remembrance Day

Remembrance Day in Canada, observed each year on November 11th, is a day of solemn reflection and respect, honouring the sacrifices made by the men and women who have served in the armed forces. It marks the anniversary of the armistice that ended World War I in 1918. Canadians across the country pause at the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month to observe two minutes of silence, commemorating the bravery of those who fought in WWI, WWII, the Korean War, peacekeeping missions, and other conflicts. This moment of quiet reflection is a powerful reminder of the courage and selflessness displayed by those who have served and continue to serve in Canada's military.

Ceremonies are held in communities large and small, with gatherings at cenotaphs, war memorials, and legions. Many Canadians wear red poppies, a symbol of remembrance inspired by the famous poem 'In Flanders Fields' by Canadian Lieutenant Colonel John McCrae. Schools, veterans' organizations, and community groups often organize events to educate younger generations about the importance of remembering the past and honouring the contributions of veterans and service members. Remembrance Day not only serves to honour fallen soldiers but also emphasizes a commitment to peace, reminding Canadians of the profound cost of war and the value of freedom.

Looking for a new book to read?

The mini library is bright red and stands out in front of the burgundy coloured department.

Lots of options!

If you're in the market for a new book to read but you're short on time, pull up in front of the Whitecourt Fire Department at any time and see what's inside the Rotary Club's mini library. There's a wide variety of options inside, with everything from novels to young adult fiction to something for the littles. There are several of these mini libraries around town and if you haven't checked them all out yet, make sure you do!

SCHOOL NEWS

Assistance dog brings energy and joy to Whitecourt Central School students

Whitecourt Central School's beloved furry friend, Flash, from Dogs with Wings Assistance Dog Society, has once again proven that he's more than just a loyal companion—he's an essential part of the school community. Flash joined Grade 3C during their Physical Education class, enthusiastically supporting students in their activities and spreading cheer throughout the gym.

The students of Ms. Masco's Grade 2 class at Pat Hardy School got into the festive spirit last week with a pumpkin decorating activity that filled the classroom with excitement and creativity. The young artists transformed their pumpkins using paint, markers, and a variety of fun decorations, each adding a personal touch to their fall masterpiece.

SCHOOL NEWS

Whitecourt Central School's Grade 2 student Sloane Vandezande joined her classmates in a festive pumpkin-painting activity, embracing the Halloween spirit with creativity and enthusiasm. The colorful event brought students together to showcase their artistic talents
