More than 800 speeding tickets issued in school and park zones

Speeding in a school or park zone isn't a good choice.

Automated Traffic Enforcement in Whitecourt has focused solely on school zones and park zones for the last bit, and through only the last six months of 2025, over 800 tickets were captured by the ATE truck, with one month specifically standing out as worse than the rest. See story page 3.

Dear Editor,

As a mother, one of the hardest things to experience is watching your children hurt emotionally and feeling powerless to stop it. I am writing this because bullying is something people often associate with schools, but sometimes it happens much closer to home. In our case, both of my children have been bullied by a certain group of kids in our neighbourhood. Thankfully, they have not experienced bullying at school, and I truly hope they never do, but it has still affected them deeply.

What hurts the most is that children should feel safe in their own neighbourhood. They should be able to ride their bikes, walk down the street, play outside and enjoy being kids without worrying about being mocked, excluded or targeted.

As a parent, it is heartbreaking to watch your children lose confidence because of the behaviour of others. You try to encourage them, support them and remind them of their worth, but words and actions can leave devastating effects, especially on young children.

I am incredibly thankful that my children feel safe and supported at school. Their teachers and school environment have been positive experiences for them, and I hope that continues. No child should ever have to feel unsafe. Anywhere.

I also hope this serves as a reminder to parents that kindness starts at home. Conversations about respect, empathy and inclusion matter. Children learn how to treat others by watching the examples around them.

At the end of the day, every child deserves kindness. Every child deserves to feel accepted. And every child deserves to feel safe not only at school, but in their own neighbourhood too.

I beg of you, please talk to your children. If you do, thank you.

Sincerely,
A Concerned Mother

More than 800 speeding tickets issued in school and park zones

| By Serena Lapointe

The Automated Traffic Enforcement (ATE) program in Whitecourt looks a bit different today than it did when it began in 2009. Changes at the provincial level in 2024 removed areas previously enforced, such as the highway corridor, leaving municipalities with one of two choices for automated enforcement: school zones and playground zones.

All Mobile Traffic Enforcement Officers are Peace Officers as appointed by the Minister of Public Safety and Emergency Preparedness. All operations conducted by the Automated Traffic Enforcement program are done alongside the guidance of the RCMP and the RCMP Traffic Safety Plan.

Before the allowable zone changes in 2024, Whitecourt used 34 locations for its program, including priority areas known for higher speeds and locations on the highway.

Now, it uses 25. Depending on where a park or school is located, the peace officer in the ATE truck could catch traffic coming from one of several directions, each of which accounts for a location. For example, Central School is flanked by four streets: 52 Ave, 53 Ave, 54 Ave and 49 Street. All directions of travel on those roads could potentially account as locations, with one focused on a time. Within the report, west/east-bound traffic on 53 Ave and west/east-bound traffic on 52 Ave were considered four total locations and used by the ATE program.

From July 2025 to December 2025, the ATE truck spent 68 percent of its time in school zones and 32 percent in playground zones. The average number of days the truck was deployed each month was 14.5. The highest month for enforcement activity was October, with 17 days, followed by August and December with 16. The lowest month to see ATE enforcement was November, with ten days.

When looking at the data for violation tickets issued by month, one month stood out amongst the rest: October. During the May 25 Regular Meeting of Council, Councillor Brian Wynn pointed out the glaring difference. "So, it looks like in October, people were very bad. Is there any explanation for that?"

Director of Community Safety, Lee Hardman, said there wasn't an explanation for why there were 279 speeding tickets handed out in October, with the next closest month coming in much lower, with 183 (September). "It's sporadic. I cannot give you a good idea as to why that is, because again, the number of times they're operating is around that 15 to 17 times a month. Forty hours a week is their average, so I cannot justify why that is higher."

Councillor Tara Baker said that having the truck in the community is beneficial because its visual presence matters. "I don't know how anyone could miss it. There are stickers on it (the truck), and it's on the side of the road, so if someone does not see it, that is unfortunate, but there is no harm in slowing down."

Mayor Ray Hilts questioned why the municipality didn't have the autonomy to use the program in other places. Hardman explained that they could request permission from the province to use ATE in areas outside of park and playground zones. "We just have to go through the business case people. We have submitted one, and since the submission of that document, we have heard from the province that they're not entertaining anything until after the summer, when they're looking at the program again," said Hardman. The Town of Whitecourt currently has a business case with the government, requesting the ability to use an intersection safety device (camera) at the Highway 43 intersection near IGA.

"It's unfortunate that we can't use this as a tool for anything outside of what it says here," said Mayor Hilts. "Being able to put this in different places. It's not just about school zones, as important as those are. There are obviously other areas in the community where it would be nice to be able to implement this kind of enforcement." He asked his council colleagues if they would support sending a letter to the Minister of Transportation and Economic Corridors to see about creating a program that is more flexible to the needs of the community. Council unanimously voted in favour of doing so.

"This is a tool in the toolbox, and I don't understand why we can't do that on our own streets, where we clearly see where it might be needed. If we want to put something on, say, Flats Road, within town, because we've got drag racers and we've got people that are doing stuff there, and it creates a safety issue, then I want to be able to put this unit there for a couple of weeks and slow it down. That's just an example (of how to use it).

I'm not saying that's happening." The revenue from Automated Traffic Enforcement Programs is broken down into a three-way split: approximately twenty-five percent each for the contractor and the municipality, and fifty percent to the province. In 2025, the local revenue from the ATE program was just under $20,000.

Due to postal delays with Canada Post and the province, tickets captured in Whitecourt in 2025 did not start hitting mailboxes until January 2026. As the community uses a six-month issuance timeline to send out tickets, those captured from January to June 2025 were lost in terms of revenue through the program. The $19,710.53 was mostly carryover from 2024, which means that 2026 will be the first year with the new guidelines and full revenue captured in the data.

Dollars collected through the Automatic Traffic Enforcement Program are used to enhance crime prevention and education through various community events and projects, and are not used by the municipality to fund basic functions. It is supplemental only. "The intent of ATE is not to generate revenue. It is for the safety and well-being of residents and visitors," explained Hardman. From July to December 2025, there were 802 tickets captured by the ATE program in the park and playground zones of the community.

Councillor Wynn asked if the community's peace officers and the RCMP get the data, so they know where problem areas are. "Absolutely. It is a high priority for both our peace officers and the RCMP to be in our school and park zones," responded Hardman. He added that they are also looking into a new program. "We are looking at introducing a more heightened program with our municipal enforcement, where it is more targeted-based. So, that is coming, it's just not in place yet," said Hardman.

Technology may give wildfire crews a powerful new advantage

New AI-based technology could help build a stronger wildfire defence by learning about fire behaviours. Minister of Infrastructure and West Yellowhead MLA Martin Long recently spoke about the new tech, as well as a big purchase that will help strengthen Alberta's fight against wildfires. Pictured are Minister of Infrastructure, and West Yellowhead MLA Martin Long (left).

| By Serena Lapointe

The West Yellowhead riding, which MLA Martin Long, Minister of Infrastructure, represents, has experienced several large wildfire emergencies over the last six years, including the catastrophic fire in Jasper in 2024, as well as large-scale evacuations in Edson and Fox Creek in 2023. These evacuations left much of the municipalities temporarily deserted as residents fled menacing, approaching fires. In Edson, the fire behaviour was reported to be highly aggressive, travelling over 30 kilometres in one day, and growing to over 200,000 hectares before it was reigned in by relentlessly hardworking crews. Fires were also battled around Peers, Mercoal, Robb and several areas within Woodlands County, to name just a few.

In an interview with The Press, MLA Long said facing a wildfire emergency isn't something anyone can truly be prepared for. "I've had to see families go through, not only the uncertainty, but the inevitable tragedy of wildfire for several years now. As a representative of our area, I don't think it's something that anyone can truly prepare for, not only the circumstance but also the aftereffects of it."

Long recently joined families in Woodlands County, sharing a feeling of helplessness as a fire burned close to homes in the West Ridge subdivision. On Monday, May 11, residents in direct proximity were told to pack up and get out, with those just outside the zone told to be ready to leave at a moment's notice. For Long and many other families who were not in the zone being evacuated, but nearby, all they could do was watch, be ready, and say a little prayer for their impacted neighbours. Having spoken to many who have been impacted by wildfire, MLA Long said he knows that the aftereffects from dealing with something so traumatic can be long-lasting. "First and foremost, my thoughts go to the families who lost in this fire, and the ones who were impacted beyond loss, because I know that it will have an impact on them regardless." His home was just a few miles away, making it all the more real for him. "I was away at work while my family was at home. It came with a bit of a sense of helplessness given the circumstance," said Long.

He credited the dedicated work of crews for getting things under control. "Number one, I would like to thank the firefighters, first responders and community members who all took part in helping." He also credited the municipality for being firesmart-minded, something that the Town of Whitecourt is also heavily focused on. "I would like to commend Woodlands County for being proactive in introducing their firesmart actions. We are one of the leading regions in the province for that, and I do commend the leadership for taking those actions," said MLA Long.

Changes to how the province attacks wildfires, especially those in close proximity to municipalities, seemed to be visible in the fight against the West Ridge fire, named Wildfire WWF017, with bombers lined up dropping consistently and fast-moving activity on the ground. "I have personally been at tables with the Minister of Forestry & Parks, who is responsible for Alberta Wildfire and have seen some drastic changes that have been taken over the last number of years where they have a real focus on hitting a fire as hard as they possibly can, as early as they possibly can," he explained.

"I had folks reaching out to me who were really pleased to see the reaction. I believe there were three helicopters and four bombers on it very quickly. It grew quite a bit, but within three days, they had the containment lines all in place. I know that residents were able to start moving in relatively quickly," said Long.

Another aspect that he said was nice to hear feedback on was how the flow of communication was passed to residents. "I heard locally that the communication was way better, which is something that has been a major focus for the Minister of Forestry and Parks, but also the Municipal Affairs Minister as well."

Long said as part of building up the province's resiliency against wildfires, new water bombers will be added to the fleet starting in 2031. "Our government is investing today for here and now, but also the future. We did recently announce that we've secured a contract with De Havilland to produce five Canadair water bombers by 2033."

The Canadair 515 amphibious water bomber is known as a super scooper, with the capability of refilling its water tanks in twelve seconds on lakes and rivers. Each aircraft can carry 6,137 litres of water and has a top speed of 330km/h. The addition of five planes more than doubles the province's current fleet of four Canadair De Havilland CL-215T "skimmer" aircraft. The province also has 19 contracted water bombers that it uses. The cost for five bombers is $400 million.

Alberta isn't the only province with the Canadair 515 on their shopping list. Manitoba recently purchased three of its own. The CL-215T's that the province of Alberta currently flies, and that helped douse the fire in the West Ridge subdivision, were built in the 80s and are still going strong. MLA Long said the purchase was about planning for the future needs of the province and being ready. Alberta's and Manitoba's planes will be built at the new state-of-the-art De Havilland production line facility in Wheatland County, near Calgary, slated to open in 2028.

MLA Long said he recently got to see and learn about new technology being used to help strengthen fire-fighting efforts while attending an announcement about a new Mutual Aid Incentive Pilot, which offers municipalities up to $125,000 to support wildfire response, encouraging earlier mutual aid requests for a crisis like the recent one near Whitecourt.

"On that tour, I got to see things like an AI camera that has been installed on the front of some of the firefighting aircraft, so they can learn from fire behaviour today, to help plan better for fire behaviour moving forward. It's just remarkable to see that kind of technology exists, and that our government is investing in procuring it so we can benefit from the knowledge," explained MLA Long.

He also added that the province has built a safeguard into the current budget. "We have a two-billion-dollar contingency fund built into our budget this year for dealing with fires and floods. This way, we aren't saying "oopsie" after the fact, and that we didn't prepare. Instead, we're actually preparing for that ahead of time, because we believe that's the responsible thing for the government to do."

Funding approved for fibre internet expansion across Woodlands County

By Haylee
Winger

More than 470 households in Woodlands County are expected to benefit from expanded access to fibre-optic internet service following a major funding announcement involving local telecommunications provider Whitecourt Communications.

The company has been awarded $16.5 million through the Universal Broadband Fund Plus (UBFP), a joint initiative funded equally by the federal and provincial governments. The funding will support the expansion of fibre-optic broadband infrastructure to identified households throughout the county.

The project is part of Alberta's broader effort to improve internet connectivity in rural areas through the Alberta Broadband Fund, a $100 million provincial program that supports the Alberta Broadband Strategy. The initiative aims to ensure rural, remote and Indigenous households across the province have access to internet speeds of at least 50 Mbps download and 10 Mbps upload by the end of the 2026-27 fiscal year.

Whitecourt Communications co-owner Curtis Brownlee said the funding will help the company continue providing telecommunications services to the region.

"Having been in business for more than 50 years, including 30 years in Whitecourt, we're proud to deliver reliable telecommunications services to our community," Brownlee said. "This funding allows us to extend sustainable, long-term internet infrastructure to even more residents."

Woodlands County Reeve Dave Kusch described the project as an important step toward achieving a long-standing goal of council.

"It's been a long-term goal of Woodlands County Council to bring critical internet infrastructure to all our residents," Kusch said. "This funding and partnership with Whitecourt Communications is a major milestone in achieving that objective."

Residents who wish to learn more about the project or determine whether their property is included in the planned expansion area are encouraged to contact Whitecourt Communications directly regarding eligibility and service availability.

Albertans now have access to non-surgical treatment for obesity

| AHS Release

Albertans now have access to non-surgical treatment for obesity — a minimally invasive weight-loss procedure performed by bariatric surgery and gastroenterology teams at the Royal Alexandra Hospital.

Endoscopic sleeve gastroplasty (ESG) reduces the stomach size by suturing it internally. The surgical team inserts a thin flexible tube with a camera down the mouth to reach the stomach. They then use tools through the endoscope to stitch the stomach from the inside to reduce the size of the organ. The procedure typically takes about 90 minutes.

"This procedure is a significant advancement in the field of weight-loss surgery, especially for patients who don't qualify for traditional bariatric surgery or prefer a less invasive option," says

Dr. Noah Switzer, upper gastrointestinal and bariatric surgeon. "Rather than having a complex surgery requiring extensive recovery, patients have access to technology that requires no cuts or incisions that allows them to go home the same or next day."

For years, Mary-Ann Thurber felt hesitant about the risks associated with bariatric surgery as a long-term weight management treatment. The 65-year-old patient in the Edmonton Adult Bariatric Specialty Surgery Clinic at the hospital found short-term success with appetite suppression medication. She was offered the new procedure as an alternative treatment option.

"Since having the procedure in February, I am sleeping better, I have more energy and ultimately feel better equipped and motivated to manage my weight without the help of appetite suppression medication," says Thurber. "I'm so grateful this option was available for me in Edmonton."

Like bariatric surgery, the new procedure makes patients feel full with less food, leading to weight loss and improvement in weight-related conditions such as diabetes, high blood pressure and sleep apnea.

"Unlike a laparoscopic sleeve gastrectomy, where upwards of 80 per cent of the stomach is removed, ESG uses an endoscopic suturing device to fold and stitch the stomach tissue into a smaller shape, keeping the entire organ in place," says Dr. Kirles Bishay, gastroenterologist at the hospital. "Thanks to new technology, we can reduce the size of the stomach without removing any part of the stomach, meaning ESG patients have a lower risk of surgery and quicker recovery."

Thurber stopped taking her appetite suppression medication shortly before the ESG procedure and is expected to continue to see some weight loss post-procedure, without the ongoing support of medication.

In the past five years, more patients are finding success with weight management with the increase of glucagon-like peptide-1 (GLP-1) prescribed medications on the market; however, stopping the medication can often lead to weight regain.

"There are benefits and risks associated with any medication," says Dr. Switzer. "ESG should help get patients off lifetime weight management medication and give them a sustainable tool to achieve better health and weight outcomes."

The endoscopic device, which allows surgeons to suture the stomach from the inside, was approved by Health Canada in February 2024. The endoscopic procedure is jointly performed by a surgeon and gastroenterologist through the Edmonton Adult Bariatric Specialty Surgery Clinic at the Royal Alex, which is the only facility in Alberta where the procedure is performed. Since first performing the procedure in December, the team has completed eight procedures, making the Royal Alex now home to the largest ESG program in Western Canada.

A referral to the Edmonton Adult Bariatric Specialty Surgery Clinic at the Royal Alex by a physician, nurse practitioner, or specialist is required for adults who struggle with obesity and meet clinic criteria. This clinic is a bariatric surgical clinic only. In preparing for bariatric surgery, medical and psychological interventions are provided to patients to ensure they are successful pre- and post-surgery.

Alberta Health Services provides a range of healthcare services for more than five million adults and children living in Alberta. Our mission is to provide excellent, patient-focused healthcare that is accessible and sustainable for all Albertans. Our current focus is on reducing emergency department wait times, increasing access to surgeries, and improving patient flow.

Whitecourt RCMP report 181 calls over two weeks

By Haylee Winger

Between May 14 and May 28, Whitecourt RCMP responded to 181 calls for service throughout the community. The most frequent incidents reported during the two-week period included wellness checks, traffic collisions and traffic-related offences, suspicious persons, and breaches of the peace.

Officers continued proactive patrols in areas identified by residents through the Community Priorities Plan Survey, focusing enforcement and visibility efforts where community concerns have been raised.

The detachment remained active in local community events and outreach initiatives. Members participated in a "Paint the Police Car" event at École St. Anne School and welcomed kindergarten students from the school for a tour of the detachment. Regular visits to local schools

On May 27, Cpl. Martin Lajeunesse took part in the Whitecourt & District Chamber of Commerce Fresh Community Market fundraiser, volunteering for the event's dunk tank attraction.

The Whitecourt RCMP also expressed appreciation to resi-

Three things to consider if you're caring for your parent

(NC) A parent's aging can prompt difficult conversations around their independence and living situation. Through planning or just circumstance, you may also find yourself taking care of the person who used to take care of you. Here are a few things to consider as you take on this new role:

1. This will be an adjustment for both of you. It may be difficult for you and your parent to adjust to this role reversal. Even if you've been independent for years, being your caregiver is still likely a significant part of your parent's life experience. Becoming their caregiver is a major life change and a rearrangement of your priorities. It's a sacrifice, and it's alright to acknowledge that to yourself.

For parents, adjusting to a loss of mobility or independence may not be easy. Everyday actions and activities that never used to take any thought might now be difficult. Some parents may feel embarrassed at needing help with things they're used to doing on their own.

2. There's help for you and your parent. You don't have to do this alone. One option for support is engaging with an occupational therapist. They're health care professionals who work with you and your parent develop new skills and ways of adapting to your environments and circumstances. In this province, they have professional standards they're held to and must be licensed by the College of Occupational Therapists of Ontario, a public resource that's there for you and the one you're caring for.

3. It's important to practice self-care, too. Many people in the "sandwich generation," caring for both their children and parents, are under tremendous stress. Even if you don't have children, caregiving still takes a great deal of time and effort, and can cause stress.

That's why it's important to look after yourself. By making time for self-care, you're able to better show up for your parent. Consider taking advantage of available community and health resources to support your mental health and help you build strategies to manage your multiple roles. It's important to remember that this stage of life is a transition, not a decline. Feeling supported can make the transition easier. With some help to adapt their living space to their needs and develop new skills, your parent can keep doing the things they love. You can learn more about how a licensed occupational therapist can help at coto.org/ot.

Several local businesses are sporting new flower boxes this summer thanks to CANFOR, which built and donated the boxes as a community project. The flowers pictured are at Spruce View Lodge, where residents and staff are enjoying the colorful addition. As you're out and about, keep an eye out for the flower boxes and the colorful blooms they hold. It's a simple addition that's helping brighten up storefronts around town.

Waiting for the world to change? Takeaways from the 2026 ATB Business Summit

| By Mark Parsons, ATB ECONOMICS

ATB's fifth annual Business Summit was held recently in Edmonton. The theme this year, Navigating a New Era: Resilience, Trade and the Alberta Advantage, provided fertile ground for an economic update to Alberta's business leaders. Sifting through the noise, the presentation took many turns, ending with some cautious optimism. Here are the key takeaways.

Surviving the shock

While preparing for the presentation, I couldn't help but reflect on where we were this time last year; facing existential dread over sweeping U.S. tariffs. Today, the dust has settled into a new normal.

We at ATB Economics have discussed the 'rupture' and 'new world order' at length over the past few months. From U.S. protectionism to the UAE exiting OPEC, nations are looking inward. In the post-rupture world, economic strength is being used by countries to exert force on others; geopolitics are the central variable changing how countries organize trade. Equity markets have staged a post-tariff comeback, fuelled by an AI boom that's been driving the economy amid geopolitical turmoil. Even with the impact of the Iran war choking the Strait of Hormuz—which transports about a fifth of global oil and natural gas (and is also a key route for fertilizer)—markets are signaling that the crisis will pass and the Strait will soon reopen.

Diagnosing the engine

Looking under the hood of the national economy tells a deeper story. Over the last decade, Canada's real GDP per capita has struggled to grow. Consumer and government spending have carried the load, while private business investment and international exports have lagged behind.

The Bank of Canada cannot save the consumer this time with ultra-low interest rates. Driven by war and global supply shocks, the Bank's Governing Council will look through short-term spikes in gasoline, diesel and fertilizer costs, but will not let high prices persist. The policy interest rate is forecast to hold steady at 2.25% this year, but risks are tilted to higher (not lower) rates if energy costs remain elevated and feed through the broader basket of goods and services we purchase every day.

This malaise affects everyday lives: an overwhelming 66% of Canadians cite the rising cost of living as one of the most important issues facing Canada. The affordability crisis is reshaping society—the share of young adults living with their parents has been rising, especially in expensive housing markets.

The CUSMA reality check

As part of the Summit's panel on trade, Adam Legge (Business Council of Alberta) and Theo Argitis (Business Council of Canada) emphasized that this era of uncertainty requires corporate planning to build structural resilience. Argitis highlighted that supply chains are shifting away from vulnerable 'just-in-time' systems, pushing commercial inventories to their highest levels since the 1990s as a hedge against global shocks.

Regarding the mandatory July 1st CUSMA review milestone, both panelists urged business leaders to tune out the political theatre, and keep in mind that even if a deal isn't reached on July 1, our existing trade agreement won't fall apart.

Given the uneven nature of U.S. tariffs across industries, the key will be presenting a united front while addressing regional grievances. For example, Ontario and Quebec will be looking for the reduction or elimination of aluminum and steel tariffs. While Alberta is relatively insulated given its composition of exports (primarily energy), it will join other provinces in looking to preserve its exemptions on CUSMA compliant goods. Rather than expecting friction-free access, the true path forward requires Canada to aggressively market its assets while patiently courting foreign capital to build connections to global buyers.

Seizing the opportunity

We cannot sit back and wait for the world to change. Our dependence on sending trade south leaves us at the mercy of U.S. politics. Prime Minister Mark Carney has announced a goal to double Canada's non-U.S. exports over the next decade, expanding our global trade footprint.

To get there, we can leverage structural advantages, such as:

- Global Energy Infrastructure: We have proven that we can build big things. The completion of the Trans Mountain expansion (TMX) sent oil exports to Asia on a hockey-stick surge from near-zero in 2023 to $9 billion last year. Similar structural liftoffs are visible at the Ridley Island Propane Export Terminal and LNG Canada Phase 1.
- AI Infrastructure: Private construction of U.S. data centres is accelerating at a historic annual rate exceeding $45 billion. AI requires immense baseload power, positioning

Western Canada—with its vast natural gas reserves and world-class AI research—in the middle of this wave.

- Agri-Food and Tourism: Alberta is transforming raw commodities into high-value revenue. Private footprints like McCain's manufacturing build-outs are making Alberta a processing hub, while Canada offers water advantages as drought concerns mount. Simultaneously, international tourism is taking flight as a service export, unlocked by expanded global airport capacity.

Now what?

The upside in our economic forecast doesn't come from hoping that the external geopolitical chaos resolves itself. It comes from within Canada's borders.

If we take advantage of the opportunities in front of us—streamlining regulation, building critical infrastructure, and driving investment—we'll finally put running shoes on and chart a new path forward.

Margery Joan Warchola
May 2, 1938 – May 19, 2026

With heavy hearts we announce on Tuesday, May 19, 2026 Margery Warchola passed away surrounded by her loving family.

Margery's legacy of love will live on in her sons, Gary, Randy (Denise), and Darin (Kim); her legacy will continue to grow with her beloved grandchildren, Tyler (Natasha), Kyle (Samantha), (their mother, Barb), Sheldon (Nicole), Sydney (Owen); and her great-grandson, Henrik. Siblings, Lorne, Cecil, Larry and Stan, and a large extended loving family.

Margery was predeceased by her husband, Walter, her two sisters, Irene Carr and Doreen Kirkpatrick, her son, Gerald, and parents, Thora and Milton Bell.

Margery grew up on a farm so staying busy came natural to her, waitressing, ushering at the movie theater, working in the post office, to bookkeeping and accounting. She married Walter and together they raised their family with lots of love, encouragement, and drives to many hockey arenas and curling rinks. But her greatest passion was her grandchildren—they were very precious to her, she loved knowing what they were doing and was so very proud of their accomplishments.

Margery kept busy with a large garden, wild berries to pick, she tried her hand at chickens, ducks and geese. She loved to travel; some of the places she has been to are Maui, Portugal, New York, and Fiji—she enjoyed many family trips that created lasting memories.

Margery kept herself active in the community she called home by volunteering for Friends of Whitecourt, the Untied Church, and the Seniors Group.

In lieu of flowers, a donation can be made in Margery's name to the Parkinson Association Alberta, www.parkinsonassociation.ca.

A funeral service for Margery will be held on Saturday, June 6, 2026 at 1:00 pm at the Whitecourt United Church, the interment at the Whitecourt Cemetery and the reception to follow at the Royal Canadian Legion Branch #44.

Condolences may be sent to www.affinityfuneralservice.ca.
